GOLDEN GATE COLLEGE REPORT

April 1966

GGC TO ESTABLISH NEW FULL-TIME LAW PROGRAM Golden Gate College will initiate the first new full-time law program in the Bay Area since the 1930's.

The three-year program leading to an LL. B. degree will begin next September. The program was developed after a comprehensive study by the administration and Trustees of the need for an additional full-time law school in the community.

Authorization to initiate the program was given by the American Bar Association at its mid-winter meeting in Chicago in February.

About 90 students can be admitted as full-time students this fall. It is estimated that eventually 300-full time students can be accommodated.

The College's part-time evening law program, within which it takes four years for students to earn degrees, will continue to serve aspiring attorneys who must work while attending college.

The part-time morning program, begun in 1961, will be gradually discontinued over the next four years, as students currently enrolled in that program graduate.

As has been its tradition, Golden Gate initiated this new program in response to a new community need. According to Dean of the Law School, John A. Gorfinkel, "Last year nearly every full-time approved law school in California was forced to turn away qualified applicants for lack of space."

During its study the College drew upon statistics compiled by the American Bar Association which indicate that over the past five years enrollments in ABA-approved law schools throughout the country have grown from about 28,000 to 45,000. The increase in applicants to law schools in California has been particularly high because of the state's unparalleled population growth.

At Golden Gate College School of Law alone, enrollment has quadrupled during the past 10 years. The last full-time law school established in the Bay Area was by the University of San Francisco in 1931.

The evening law school at GGC was the first of its kind in the west back in 1901. It is currently one of only six ABA-approved evening law schools in California.
