

FINAL RITES FOR JUSTICE — The casket containing the body of Jesse L. Carter of Sleepy Hollow, associate justice of the California Supreme Court, is placed in hearse after funeral service yesterday at First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo. Gov. Edmund G. Brown stands at extreme right. In front of him is Robert E. Smallman, who conducted Masonic rites for the late justice.

(Independent-Journal photo)

Dignitaries Pay Last Respects To Carter

Funeral services for Jesse Washington Carter of Sleepy Hollow, associate justice of the California Supreme Court, were attended by some 300 persons from all walks of life yesterday at the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo.

Among the notables paying final respects to the 70-year-old jurist, who died Sunday, were Gov. Edmund G. Brown, Atty. Gen. Stanley Mosk, Chief Justice Phil S. Gibson of the state Supreme Court and Carter's fellow associate justices.

Dr. Carl Gordon Howie, pastor of Calvary Presbyterian Church of San Francisco, officiated at the simple rites. There were four floral tributes, one of them forming the emblem of the Masonic order.

MASONIC RITES

Preceding the religious services were Masonic rites conducted by Robert A. Smallman, worshipful master of Fairfax Lodgs 556. Justice Carter was a master Mason in Western Star Lodge 2.

Before placing a Masonic scroll on the closed casket, Smallman paid "the last tribute of our affection" to Justice Carter, who, he said, had entered "that celestial lodge above."

Dr. Howie quoted several selections from the Bible, including the 23rd Psalm. He offered a prayer asking that the good influences of Justice Carter's life be blessed and sustained "that they may continue to bless those whom he knew and loved."

'MEMORY BE SWEET'

"May the memory of him be sweet to those who knew him best," Dr. Howie said.

The funeral, directed by the Harry M. Williams Mortuary of San Rafael, was attended by members of Justice Carter's immediate family and many relatives. Burial was in Mt. Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

Family members present included the justice's widow, Jean; two sons and a daughter, Oliver Jesse Carter, a judge of the U.S. District Court in San Francisco, Prof. Harlan Field Carter and Mrs. Silvio Bui of Redding; two sisters, Mrs. Emma Lane of San Anselmo and Mrs. Lizzie Reese of Perris, Riverside County, and two brothers, Henry Carter of Redding and John E. Carter of Cottonwood, Shasta County.

ACTIVE PALLBEARERS

Active pallbearers included two nephews; Robert D. Carter of Modesto and John Harvey Carter of Sacramento; Daniel S. Carlton of Redding, Superior Court Judge Samuel Finley of Del Norte County, Charles Goff of Merced and Leonard Martin of Ross.

Governor Brown, Attorney General Mosk and Chief Justice Gibson were among the honorary pallbearers.

The rites were attended by many Bay Area attorneys and judges, the latter including Albert Wollenberg of the U.S. District Court in San Francisco; Murray Draper of the 1st District Court of Appeals; Jordan L. Martinelli, N. Charles Brusatori and Thomas F. Keating of Marin County Superior Court; Richard M. Sims Jr. and Harold J. Haley of Marin Municipal Court, and Byron Arnold of San Francisco Municipal Court.

PAY LAST TRIBUTE

Also among those paying final respects to Justice Carter were David Menary, former Marin County sheriff; George

LAWMEN MEET AT FUNERAL—Outside First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo, after Justice Jesse L. Carter funeral services, Edmund G. Brown (center), who was attorney general before becoming governor Jan. 3, converses with former Sheriff David Menary (left, back to camera), Police Chief Donald T. Wood of San Anselmo and Thomas A. Maloney, who served as a state senator from San Francisco for 32 years. (Independent-Journal photo)

W. Hall, former Marin assessor; Donald T. Wood, San Anselmo police chief; Sally Stanford, Sausalito restaurateur; Senior Capt. Walter Nash of the Salvation Army; Arthur Samish, former legislative lobbyist in Sacramento; Edwin (Horsetrader Ed) Shapiro, San Francisco automobile dealer; Clinton T. Duffy, former warden of San Quentin Prison; Walter R. Castro, chairman of the Marin County Board of Supervisors; Joseph Karesh, U.S. commissioner in San Francisco; David Snodgrass, dean of Hastings College of Law, San Francisco, and Dr. Leo L. Stanley, former chief surgeon at San Quentin Prison.