PREFACE

Volume Forty-Six of the Golden Gate University Law Review marks the forty-sixth year the students of Golden Gate University School of Law have published a student-managed and student-edited scholarly legal journal. Over those forty-six years, Golden Gate University Law Review has published issues relating to a wide variety of legal topics, including those affecting women and the LGBTQ community, and have made changes to make the Law Review more accessible to legal professionals in many fields of law. Recently, we have added an online forum where Law Review members can write and publish short, blog-like pieces on relevant legal topics, and we look forward to continuing to grow this platform.

Articles that discuss changing laws and policies to create a better society have been seen throughout the issues published over the last forty-six years, and this year is no different. Each one of the four articles published in this year's issue provides recommendations on how to change existing laws and policies so that people can receive equal justice under the law.

Behind this Comments Issue stands a group of individuals without whom the publication of this issue would not have been possible. A law review issue is never an individual effort, but instead the result of much collaboration and this issue is no exception. Many thanks to the Law Review Staff Writers, Associate Editors, and Board Members who have contributed immensely to this process.

On behalf of the Editorial Board, we would like to express our appreciation to Dean Rachel Van Cleave, as well as the faculty and staff of Golden Gate University School of Law, without whose support the Law Review would not be possible. We are especially grateful for Adjunct Professor Jennifer Pesetsky's tireless assistance. We would also like to extend thanks to Adjunct Faculty Advisor Deanne Morton for providing her editorial guidance and expertise to Golden Gate University Law Review.

As Editor-in-Chief and Executive Comments Editor, we have had the pleasure of working with so many talented minds to ensure this issue contributes to discussions around many areas of the legal field. It is our privilege to present this edition of the Golden Gate University Law Review Comments Issue.
