Re: Task Force Report

Here is the final draft of our report. The President’s Office will be officially sending it out, along with the reports of the other three task forces.

The meeting to discuss all these reports will be sometime in late March and you will be informed by the President’s office.

Thanks to all of you for the work on this.

Appendix F: Participation in Task Force
The task force was charged with the following:

1. Determine which universities are offering international studies in the Bay Area and describe the nature of these programs.

2. Recommend an international studies program for Golden Gate University campuses.

3. Recommend an advisory and administrative structure for Golden Gate University in international studies.

4. Determine the current state or international programming at GGU and determine what needs to be added, including languages.

5. Recommend academic analogs to the Bay Area's international community, including linkages to the largest regional ethnic and national groups, including Filipinos, Chinese, Hispanics, African-Americans, Indonesians, Pacific Islanders, and others.

The group saw its central concern as being GGU's educational programs, academic curriculum and faculty scholarship, and focused on charges 1-4.

"International studies" was interpreted as covering four areas:

1. Degree and non-degree programs in International Management, International Affairs, International Legal Studies, and interdisciplinary International Studies.

2. "Globalizing" or adding an international dimension, as relevant, to other degree and non-degree programs in business administration, public administration, liberal arts and law.

3. Providing opportunities for students to have international experience, including foreign languages and study abroad, as part of their education.

4. Support for internationally oriented faculty scholarship.

1 Current fashion in academic circles is to speak of the "internationalization" of education. Because the term is ambiguous, we are avoiding it, and using the equally problematic term "globalization." The broad operative definition we attach to it is "education that prepares students for participation in the global community and economy."
DEFINING GGU’S GLOBALIZATION MISSION

Preamble

It is important that we define from the outset a clear vision of our globalization mission, academic goals and institutional objectives in support of it, and what we see as the distinctive educational focus that distinguishes us from other institutions.

If we do not have a coherent educational philosophy guiding our decisions, our internationally oriented programs will risk being piecemeal, opportunistic, and mutually inconsistent. In our thinking and planning, we must discriminate between market-driven strategic considerations and mission-driven educational imperatives. Entrepreneurship should be in support of vision, not the other way around.

Our globalization mission should be consonant with GGU’s central mission of educating students for the professions. It should go beyond the old paradigms for international studies which aimed to train U.S. "area experts" on different parts of the world and give U.S. students "foreign experience." It should take into account the reality of a student body which is itself international. It should aim at preparing all students for employment in a global economy and to be leaders in the global community of the future. It should recognize that globalization is taking place in all spheres of life, both domestically and abroad. It should see that globalization issues and domestic diversity issues are interconnected. It should encourage us to re-think globally everything we do in our educational programs and life as a university community.

Proposed mission statement

"Golden Gate University is committed to education that encourages global perspectives and an awareness of international issues, and prepares students for citizenship, professional work and leadership in the economically interdependent and culturally diverse world of the twenty-first century."

Academic goals and institutional objectives

1. In all curricula, develop significant international content and comparative approaches, and foster understanding of different cultural and national perspectives on common issues and problems.
2. Offer a number of graduate and undergraduate programs specifically designed to prepare students for international careers.

3. Work towards the goal of enabling all students to achieve competency in a foreign language.

4. In the student body, faculty and staff, recruit the broadest possible international diversity, experience and expertise possible.

5. In all classes and programs, cultivate a learning environment that respects and draws strength from the international diversity of the student body.

6. Through campuses abroad, student and faculty exchanges, study and internship abroad programs, and internationally oriented co-curricular activities, offer students opportunities for significant international experience.

7. Provide support services aimed at effectively integrating students of all backgrounds into the educational community and increasing their chances of success.

8. Seek to make of GGU an internationally known center for applied and practitioner-oriented global education and internationally oriented faculty scholarship.

GGU’s distinctive focus

All institutions of higher education today are seeking to globalize their academic programs. Most colleges and universities in the Greater Bay Area are far ahead of GGU in terms of foreign languages, area studies, study abroad, faculty scholarship, non-credit and extra-curricular programs, and outreach activities. Globalizing the curriculum as a whole has barely begun. The curriculum of our internationally oriented degree and certificate programs is adequate in comparison with others, but not particularly distinctive or outstanding.

If we are to distinguish ourselves and develop a unique identity in international studies and globally oriented education, we must build on our special strengths:

1. The professional focus of our programs and their direct relevance to careers and employment.

2. Our distinctive tradition of emphasis on business, economics, public service and law.
3. Close connections with the world of corporate, government and non-profit employers.

4. A number of key faculty, academic administrators and staff with considerable international experience, expertise and connections.

5. An adjunct faculty of academically qualified practitioners active in their professional fields.

6. An international student body and alumni network.

7. A central campus location in cosmopolitan San Francisco.

8. A track record of institutional experience in Southeast Asia, and potential for developing special initiatives and connections in that region of the Pacific Rim.

GGU should therefore strive to become the educational institution in the Greater Bay Area best known for providing internationally oriented programs that combine academic learning and professional practice, education that leads directly into professional careers, and a special emphasis on the Southeast Asian region of the Pacific Rim.
CURRENT STATE OF INTERNATIONAL STUDIES AT GGU

Degree and Certificate Programs  (see Appendix A)

At present, GGU offers five internationally oriented degree programs and three certificates. All are offered only on the San Francisco campus, except for the MBA International Management, which has a group of students at Los Altos.3

2 A new MS in International Business and Economics has been proposed and approved by UCASC. Pending final decisions on degree consolidation and administrative reorganization, as well as definitions of "substantive change" requiring WASC approval, its status is in limbo.

3 A handful of individual student enrollments appear for the MBA International Management, MA International Affairs and BS International Management at GGU's other Northern California campuses.

4 Source: Office of Admissions and the University Registrar, Total Gross Individual Enrollments, Fall 1992 Trimester (as of December 9, 1992).

5 The Law School does not track students by concentration. Estimates are as follows: 30-40 students take International Law classes every semester, 20 participate in the International Law Student Association, 10-12 are working on the Comparative Law Journal, 3-5 obtain certificates every year.

6 Concentration went into effect Fall 1992, though courses in International Affairs had been offered regularly before. Concentrations as of December 9 were not being tracked. Estimate is that of the 17 degree and 7 non-degree students listed in Political Science, 1/3 are in the International Affairs concentration.
In addition, four certificate programs are offered:

- International Affairs (graduate)
- International Legal Studies (graduate)
- International Management (undergraduate)
- Professional Export Management (graduate)

There is little coordination or cross-fertilization among these programs or with other programs in the university. Students in BS International Management take one course in Political Science, and a few law students are concurrently working towards the MA International Affairs or MBA International Management. Students in other MBA programs usually take some courses in international management, economics, finance or marketing. At the undergraduate level, all students take one course in the World Cultures and Civilizations or the comparative History of Culture and Ideas areas of General Education.

Courses (see Appendix B)

Out of a total of 708 courses that will appear in the 1993-94 Bulletin, 98 (13.8%) have international focus or significant international content. Of these, almost a third (30) are offered by the International Management and International Affairs programs.

The extent to which international perspectives and subject-matter are incorporated into other courses is not ascertainable from course descriptions, and seems to be largely dependent on the interests of individual instructors.

There is some overlap between courses offered by different units, and both cross-listing and team-teaching are not encouraged by present academic policies and practices.

Foreign languages

GGU presently offers no foreign language instruction. In the past, there were a few non-credit offerings under the English Language Skills Center, but enrollments were always low.

The only program with a foreign language requirement is the MA International Affairs. Students are required to "demonstrate written and spoken knowledge of at least one language other than English." Written evidence of having taken language courses at other institutions fulfills this requirement.
Study abroad and faculty exchanges

While GGU has growing numbers of international students from all parts of the world, the only program enabling GGU's U.S. students to study abroad is the Law School's recently created Summer Study programs in Thailand, Italy and Indonesia (the last two in the planning stages).

Only the Law School regularly brings visiting faculty from abroad. School of Management faculty have had opportunities in the past to teach abroad in GGU's Singapore program. No genuine faculty exchange programs exist at this point.

Faculty expertise and scholarship

The task force has not had time to carry out a comprehensive survey of all faculty, full-time and adjunct. Our rough estimate is that 30% of the full-time faculty have international expertise or significant international experience, and 25% have foreign language competency.

A few of the full-time faculty do research of an international nature and publish. Systematic information on all full-time and adjunct faculty is not available. The Law School has a Comparative Law Journal; there are no other university publications in international studies.

Non-credit and extra-curricular activities

1. Non-credit programs

Individual faculty with international expertise do outside consulting and public speaking, but university-sponsored non-credit training programs are relatively few. The Law School runs a program training non-U.S. lawyers in U.S. law. The task force is not aware of other programs at this point.

2. Speakers, public events and international visitors

Activities are decentralized, each academic unit organizing and publicizing its events independently; attendance is generally a problem. A university-wide International Lecture Series was started two years ago, but was discontinued because of low participation. Another example of a fine event poorly attended is the Law School-sponsored Fulbright Scholars conference of the past two years. The most successful public events are those co-sponsored with other organizations such as the World Affairs Council or the U.N. Association, for which the audiences are mostly outside people.
3. Student organizations

The following student organizations with international focus are currently active. The first three have a disciplinary focus, the remainder are organizations of international students from particular countries.

- International Law Students Association
- International Affairs Club
- International Management Club
- Asian Business Association
- Chinese Students Association
- Euro-Club
- Hispanic Business Association
- Indonesian Students Organization
- International Africans Club
- International Students Club
- Malaysian Students Organization
- Nippon Business Association
- Thai Students Association
- Pilipino Association for Recreation and Enrichment

There is also a university-wide administration-faculty-student Committee for the Concerns of Culturally Diverse Students.
INTERNATIONAL STUDIES AT OTHER GREATER BAY AREA INSTITUTIONS

Description of survey

The task force's survey of international studies at other Greater Bay Area institutions covered the following 20 institutions:

Research universities and graduate institutes

- University of California - Berkeley
- Stanford University
- Monterey Institute of International Studies
- California Institute of International Studies

California State University campuses

- San Francisco State
- Hayward State
- San Jose State
- Sacramento State

Private comprehensive universities

- University of San Francisco
- Golden Gate University
- John F. Kennedy University
- National University
- University of Phoenix

Private colleges

- St. Mary's College
- Mills College
- Dominican College
- College of the Holy Names
- College of Notre Dame
- Menlo College
- New College of California

Community colleges were not covered, nor were unaccredited or non-credit educational programs.

Manuel Santamaria, our graduate student research assistant, visited each campus personally (except for Sacramento State, Phoenix and National), collected materials and spoke to administrative staff and students. For each institution, he was asked to look into and summarize the following aspects of international studies and global education:
International Affairs/Relations programs
International Management programs
International Studies majors
International Communications/Cross-Cultural Studies
Foreign languages taught
Foreign language requirements for undergraduates
Area studies programs
International dimensions of major degree programs
International Studies and Area Studies Centers
Study Abroad programs
Non-credit programs
Placement services for international careers

The findings are summarized in chart form in Appendix C, and the narrative compilation in Appendix D.

Summary of findings

Among the findings most pertinent to future directions for international studies at GGU are the following:

1. The only institutions offering no foreign language instruction at all, at either the undergraduate or the graduate level, are GGU, JFK, National, Phoenix and New College of California.

2. Starting Fall 1992, all CSU campuses have instituted a two-semester undergraduate foreign language requirement. UC-Berkeley and Stanford have had requirements all along. Among the private colleges and universities, the situation is mixed: USF, Dominican and Notre Dame have a requirement, St. Mary’s, Mills and Holy Names do not.

3. The most commonly taught languages are:

   Chinese (Mandarin)
   Japanese
   Spanish
   French
   Russian
   Italian
   German
   Portuguese

4. Languages of Southeast Asia (including Malay-Indonesian, Thai, Vietnamese and Tagalog) are taught at only a few institutions, primarily UC-Berkeley.

5. All institutions except GGU, JFK, National, Phoenix and New College of California have Study Abroad programs.
6. Undergraduate and graduate programs in International Business and in International Affairs are available at most institutions, both state and private. There are considerable variations in curricula, however. GGU needs to consider its curricula in comparison to others.

7. The only institutions offering an undergraduate major in interdisciplinary International Studies are UC-Berkeley, Dominican College and Hayward State. This is a possible area for GGU to develop.

8. The new field of International Communications/Cross-Cultural Studies is offered only at the University of San Francisco and the Monterey Institute of International Studies. This is a possible area for GGU to develop.

9. Few institutions offer certificate programs. UC-Berkeley has a graduate certificate in Russia/Eastern Europe Studies; USF has certificates in Pacific Rim, Latin America and Western Europe Studies. This is a potential area for GGU to develop.

10. Pacific Rim programs exist in different formats at most institutions which teach languages of the region. In addition to UC-Berkeley and Stanford, there are excellent programs at USF, Dominican and Mills. To come up with anything that could be as attractive as these established programs are would be a major challenge.

11. With the exception of UC-Berkeley, no programs focus on Southeast Asia.

12. Latin America programs of some sort exist at most institutions. Nowhere, however, are they linked to Pacific Rim programs or to Southeast Asia. While GGU presently has very little of the necessary infrastructure, a "Greater Pacific Rim" orientation that includes North America, Latin America, East Asia and Southeast Asia seems to be something original that would not duplicate what is being done elsewhere.

13. Doctoral degrees are restricted to area studies and language degrees at UC-Berkeley and Stanford, International Communication and International Education degrees at USF, and International Law degrees at UC-Berkeley, USF and GGU.

14. Placement into internationally oriented jobs upon completion of programs is a major issue for students. Institutions and programs differ in the quality of placement services. It is not clear to us how well GGU does presently in relation to other institutions, but this is a potential area for development.
RECOMMENDATION # 1: A CENTER FOR INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

To coordinate and spearhead the implementation of GGU's globalization mission, the task force strongly recommends the establishment of a Center for International Studies. Unless we have such a Center, we believe it will be difficult for the university to move forward on the recommendations made by this task force.

The purpose of the Center would be to coordinate, support, encourage and serve as focus for the development of teaching, scholarly and public programs of an internationally oriented nature at GGU. It would be the university's "think-tank" on international studies and global education, the place around which the university's identity in this area would take shape.

The Center would report to the Academic Vice President through a rotating faculty Director and be administered by a Coordinator with academic credentials in international studies.

GGU full-time, visiting and adjunct faculty involved in internationally oriented teaching and scholarship would be affiliated to the Center as members, with certain rights and privileges as well as responsibilities. Associate status would also be available by invitation to other individuals in or outside GGU seeking an academic affiliation for relevant scholarly or professional projects.

The work of the Center would be guided by an advisory board consisting of Center faculty, outside professionals and faculty from other institutions, and relevant non-academic GGU staff.

Functions of the Center

1. Serve as a clearing house for information about internationally oriented programs of study, course offerings, faculty activities, public events and conferences in GGU's different Schools and academic programs.

2. Encourage coordination and cross-listing of courses between programs and Schools, and the development of cross-disciplinary courses and programs of study.

3. Coordinate and put out schedules of internationally oriented courses, publish announcements and calendars of public events, eventually a newsletter.

7 The Law School already has a functioning Advanced Center for International Legal Studies.
4. Serve as forum for ongoing campus discussion and implementation of GGU's globalization mission.

5. Encourage and promote internationally oriented scholarship and publication by GGU faculty and other Center associates; eventually publish a journal.

6. Support, coordinate and encourage the seeking of grants for program development and individual research in international studies; oversee administration of grants.

7. Sponsor, co-sponsor, coordinate and provide logistical support for speakers, symposia, conferences, non-credit offerings, extension and outreach services of an internationally oriented nature.

8. Develop and facilitate faculty exchanges; affiliate and serve as point of contact for Fulbright and other visiting scholars from abroad.

9. Develop and oversee student study, work-study, exchange and internship abroad programs.

10. Foster GGU participation in regional and national public forums concerned with international education.

11. Develop and implement outreach activities linking GGU to Bay Area international/ethnic communities, public affairs organizations, the international business community, the diplomatic community, trade and professional organizations, high schools, etc.

We believe this Center should not take on responsibilities relating to international student recruitment, advising or extra-curricular activities. Nor should the Center take on responsibilities having to do with the administering of GGU programs overseas. These functions should be taken care of by upgrading the appropriate student services and administrative units. Communication and coordination are essential, but the focus of this unit should remain academic.

Recommended start-up date

We recommend the Center be established starting Fall 1993, on a modest scale, with a faculty Director on 6 units release time and part-time clerical and/or graduate student research assistant support. The Director’s main tasks for this first year would be:

1. Initiate coordination of existing program schedules

2. Establish the structure and role of the Center
3. Work with faculty and Deans to develop a three-year plan for implementing this task force's recommendations

4. Work with the Development/Sponsored Projects Office to identify outside funding sources for program initiatives

5. Define the Coordinator position and find an appropriate person to fill it starting Fall 1994.

RECOMMENDATION # 2: FOREIGN LANGUAGES

The question of foreign language instruction and requirements needs to be placed in the context of how best to prepare students for "global literacy" and the sensitive understanding of other cultures. Increasingly, the "globally illiterate" person will be disadvantaged professionally as well as personally in an increasingly interconnected world.

The task force is of the strong opinion that the time is right for finally introducing foreign languages into the GGU undergraduate curriculum as a graduation requirement, and as a prerequisite requirement for at least some of the graduate programs. We believe it could be done as early as Fall 1994.

However, we may want to consider whether an "equivalency" system should be developed which gives students a number of different ways to show evidence of "global literacy":

* taking or showing evidence of having passed two trimesters of high-school or lower-division language study

* course work on particular culture areas

* course work in cross-cultural communication * passing a language and cultural proficiency exam (such as ETS) on a particular language and culture area

* life/study/work aboard

Our purposes in teaching foreign languages should go beyond teaching people how to "handle" cultural situations ("Japanese for the Business Traveller") to using the study of language to understand other people's fundamental ways of thinking ("Japanese as a Window to Understanding Japanese Culture").
The kind of language teaching we need at GGU is that being developed by applied language people, so-called "language studies," not the discipline-and-literature based approach of traditional academic foreign language departments. The Monterey Institute of International Studies is a pioneer in this area, and we should learn from them. Furthermore, we should experiment with formats other than the five-days-a-week one-hour-a-day of the traditional language programs at most universities.

Mounting foreign language programs is an expensive operation, requiring considerable infrastructure (language laboratories, etc.), and long-range plans to build up enrollments and continuity. In the early stages, we may want to enter into articulation agreements with other institutions, including community colleges, and only gradually introduce our own courses as we are able to financially.

The languages we should offer are probably the same ones that are offered elsewhere, as these are the ones most in demand. However, if we choose to make Southeast Asia an area of emphasis, we might think in terms of the little-studies languages of that region as well. We might also want to think about the major languages of the Middle East.

Top priority for GGU

Chinese (Mandarin)
Japanese
Spanish
Malay-Indonesian†

Second priority

Russian
German
French
Portuguese

Other possibilities

Thai
Tagalog
Vietnamese
Arabic
Farsi

† Because of our strong links with Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore, we might consider Malay-Indonesian as a priority language. It is offered as a scholarly degree at UC-Berkeley, but nowhere as an applied language.
RECOMMENDATION # 3: UNDERGRADUATE MAJOR IN INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

At the suggestion of Dr. John Sloane, former Chair of the International Relations program at San Francisco State, currently teaching as an adjunct faculty member in GGU's International Affairs program, we propose establishing a new interdisciplinary International Studies B.A. starting Fall 1994.

This major would make excellent preparation for graduate study in international business, international affairs, international law and a number of other internationally oriented academic fields and careers. We would also develop an option for students in other undergraduate majors to take it as a minor.

The degree could be put together using only existing courses which are taken by students in other majors. There would thus be no enrollment problem. But to make the curriculum more meaningful and integrated, a few additional courses are recommended. A number of these are already being contemplated for General Education purposes.

While the degree should probably be coordinated by Arts & Sciences, faculty with relevant expertise from all Schools would be assigned to the program team in charge of developing the major.

A preliminary draft of what such a major might look like is contained in Appendix E.

RECOMMENDATION # 4: GLOBALIZATION OF THE CURRICULUM INITIATIVE

The task force recommends that over the course of the 1993-94 academic year, every School do the following:

1. Examine its curriculum, both degree requirements and individual courses, from the perspective of the university's globalization mission, academic goals and institutional objectives.

2. Send one or more faculty members to an appropriate national conference on globalization of the curriculum.

3. Organize meetings with adjunct faculty (from all campuses) who teach particular courses to examine with them ways in which these courses can be taught from a more global perspective.

4. Develop short-term, mid-term and long-term plans for increasing international content, comparative perspectives and faculty diversity in every program.
5. Plan to bring a first round of changes to UCASC for adoption and inclusion in the 1994-95 GGU Bulletin.

OTHER PROGRAMMATIC RECOMMENDATIONS

The task force offers the following additional programmatic recommendations, to be implemented in stages over the next three years as fiscally possible. We believe it is important to start with small, concrete steps and build slowly on the basis of our existing strengths and resources. While different academic units and individuals would assume responsibility for particular items, the Center for International Studies should coordinate and provide leadership for these efforts.

1. Send a team of faculty, lead by the Center Director, to one or more national conferences on globalization of the curriculum. Formulate a set of problems beforehand, and arrange a university-wide symposium afterwards for maximum benefit.

2. Purchase institutional memberships in the leading academic organizations dealing with the international dimensions of higher education, subscriptions to key journals, and leading reports and books on the subject.

3. Ask each School and degree program to develop its agenda on globalization of their curriculum and fostering a positive climate for diversity.

4. Update and expand graduate and undergraduate curriculum in International Affairs.

5. Develop a range of program abroad possibilities for GGU students, including study at overseas GGU campuses, student exchanges, study abroad programs, summer language programs, work-study, internships. Begin with arranging for out students to receive academic credit for participating in programs run by other institutions.

6. Develop a faculty exchange program and encourage all Schools and programs to pursue such exchanges. To begin with, if any GGU faculty member goes on a leave of absence, try to replace this person with a visiting professor from abroad.

7. Develop ways to support, recognize and reward faculty scholarship on international studies.
8. Encourage international visiting scholars to affiliate with the GGU's Center for International Studies, and find ways of enabling them to contribute to the enrichment of classroom and extra-curricular life.

9. Revive the International Lecture Series.

10. Organize an annual international studies conference.

11. Provide faculty development opportunities in global education, cross-cultural communication, language study, etc.

12. Develop both undergraduate and graduate courses in Cross-Cultural Communication; an MBA concentration in Communications could include such a course as one of the required three.

13. Make use of international expertise of both full-time and adjunct faculty and recruit more faculty with this kind of expertise.

14. Develop a multi-pronged proposal for the development of international studies at GGU, and plan to apply for federal grant support once the Boren Bill gets over its present limbo and is under the Department of Education.

15. Apply for FIPSE and other grants to support the development of foreign language instruction.

16. Develop a regional specialization in the Pacific Rim, defined as including Latin America, Canada and Southeast Asia as well as East Asia, extending eventually perhaps to include the countries of South Asia as well.

17. Develop and promote practitioner-oriented certificate programs as a GGU specialty.

18. Work towards scheduling a self-contained undergraduate daytime program which would allow full-time students to complete their degrees taking only daytime classes; it would attract both international and domestic students who specifically want a full-time college experience in San Francisco in interaction with students from all over the world.

19. Look into the possibility of offering joint degrees with universities abroad that have programs like ours.

20. Develop cross-listing and team teaching of courses to pair regular faculty with faculty, full-time or adjunct, who have international expertise.

21. Consolidate internationally oriented courses by reducing duplicate courses and cross-listing courses.
22. Plan in the long run for distance learning, so the internationally oriented courses can be taught at the other campuses; at the start, concentrate the development of international studies on the San Francisco campus.

23. Convene at GGU a Bay Area-wide conference on foreign language teaching issues for small educational institutions.

24. Track and establish contacts with internationally oriented trade and government organizations.

25. Develop in-house training programs for executives going abroad.

26. Join whatever consortia of Greater Bay Area universities and colleges exist in international studies.

DOMICILING AND MANAGEMENT OF DEGREE PROGRAMS

The task force takes the view that academic programs should be domiciled in Schools according to their disciplinary content, but should make use of faculty expertise regardless of School. It also believes that programs should be overseen by a Chair/Manager who has ultimate responsibility, but works with a group of full-time and core adjunct faculty assigned to the program.

M.A. in International Affairs

The M.A. International Affairs should be transferred back to the School of Public Administration (a.k.a. Public and International Service), to be managed by a faculty member with appropriate international affairs credentials. We further recommend that relevant faculty from the School of Management, Law and Arts & Sciences be assigned to the program team. We note that the Chair of the present International Management/International Affairs Department is opposed to this move, arguing that the program has grown dramatically since it was moved from Public Administration to Management, and that a change of direction could be harmful to student enrollments.

B.S. and M.B.A. in International Management

To be determined in the reorganization of the School of Management.
B.A. in Political Science with International Affairs Concentration

To remain in Arts and Sciences, under management of Political Science Chair. Faculty from the School of Public and International Service to be assigned to program team.

New proposed B.A. in International Studies

This new proposed interdisciplinary undergraduate degree should be managed by the School of Arts and Sciences, with faculty from all relevant Schools assigned to the program team.

Foreign Languages

Foreign language instruction should be developed by the School of Arts & Sciences, with the help of a Core Adjunct faculty coordinator. They should be offered for academic credit in the School of Arts and Sciences, with option for people to take these courses on a non-credit basis through whatever is the successor to our Center for Professional Development.
APPENDIX A

GGU DEGREE AND CERTIFICATE PROGRAMS
Requirements for the M.B.A. Degree in International Management

This curriculum combines theory with practical perspectives and presents knowledge of maximum operational usefulness for managers in the fields of international and multinational business.

The curriculum consists of a General Business Program and an Advanced Program. The courses that comprise the General Business Program deal with the concepts, tool subjects and analytical skills essential for the mastery of the more sophisticated professional subject matter of the Advanced Program. Individual General Business courses may be waived if the student has previously completed comparable courses at an educational institution accredited by the appropriate regional accrediting association. Students may be admitted to Advanced Program courses before completion of the entire General Business Program, but must complete the General Business Program by the time that 12 units have been earned in the Advanced Program.

All students in the program must complete 18 units of Core Courses and 15 units of Elective Courses to be chosen from a list of IM courses. A maximum of six units of IA courses may also be selected as Electives. The selection of courses offered through other departments requires the permission of the Chair of the Department of International Management and International Affairs.

In addition to the courses listed below, students admitted to this program are expected to possess a level of mathematical skill at least equivalent to Intermediate Algebra (Math 20). Students may meet this requirement by satisfying one of the five screening criteria listed under the heading "Mathematics Proficiency" in the section on "Admission to Master's Degree Programs."

The M.B.A. degree in International Management requires the completion of a total of 63 units, as follows:

Certificate in Professional Export Management

Qualified students wishing to enroll in this program on a non-degree basis may earn a Professional Export Management Certificate by successfully completing with a "B" average or better, five graduate courses (15 units). The required courses are IM 345, IM 353 and IM 356. Two electives may be chosen from any 300-series courses with the "IM" prefix.
The International Law Program at Golden Gate University offers a variety of courses in international and comparative law. In addition, in 1990 the school added a Distinguished Visiting Professor of International Law to its faculty, Professor Sompong Suchartikul.

Basic Courses:

Comparative Legal Systems (3)
This seminar introduces students to legal systems other than our own. The purpose is to enable students to recognize and analyze legal problems that might confront a U.S.-trained lawyer in dealing with matters involving application of foreign law. The course focuses on the fundamental historical, institutional, and procedural differences between the common law systems and the civil law or ecclesiastical systems, with an emphasis on the code systems of continental Europe and their use as models in developing countries.

International Business Transactions (3)
The course is an introduction to the law practice of international trade and investment. It analyzes basic international trade principles; the law of international contract and dispute resolution; international trade law; international finance; international regulation of business; multinational corporations; the law of economic development; and international transfer of technology. Legal resources and research techniques are explored through contemporary readings and studies of business activities, transactions, and regulations on global, regional, and national levels. Prerequisite: Commercial Transactions or consent of instructor.

International Human Rights (2)
This course explores international treaties and agreements, United Nations' resolutions and procedures, war crimes, and domestic laws involved in the protection of international human rights.

International Law (3)
An examination of the sources and operation of international law, with emphasis on current international legal problems. This course covers legal settings of the nation-state system; international organizations and tribunals; the use of force; foreign affairs powers of the U.S. government; law of the sea; regulation of international economic activity, including problems of foreign investment and expropriation; and individual rights under international law.

International Organizations (2)
A survey of international organizations, including the United Nations and its agencies, as well as institutions for dispute resolution. This course explores the establishment, classification, status, and capacity of international organizations; the membership and activities of international organizations; and special issues of regional organizations, such as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Warsaw Pact, Organization of American States, and Helsinki Conference.

Advanced Courses and Seminars:

Asian/Pacific Trade Seminar (2)
This seminar examines legal aspects of doing business with countries in the Asian/Pacific Basin, including China and Japan, the ASEAN nations, and socialist nations. It considers a wide range of international regulations, national controls, private arrangements and sanctions, investment issues, tariff problems, and special problems of bilateral agreements.

European Economic Community Law (2)
A survey of the historical origins, development, aims, purposes, and policies of the European common market. Topics include analysis of the EEC legal system, including law and treaty making, and judicial resolution of disputes; free movement of goods and payments; free movement of persons; freedom to provide services; protection of competition; intellectual property; and external relations of the community.

International Dispute Resolution (2)
This course emphasizes the various methods of resolving international commercial disputes, including litigation, arbitration, and mediation.

International Environmental Law (3)
This seminar will analyze and compare the institutions and agreements that deal with such international environmental problems as acid rain, greenhouse gasses, endangered species, tropical deforestation, pesticide export, hazardous and nuclear waste proliferation, and other current issues. Some of the East vs. West and North vs. South political implications surrounding these issues and policies will be examined, as well as the roles played by international non-governmental organizations.

International Tax Planning (3)
See: Taxation.

Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition (2)
The American Society of International Law sponsors this moot court competition, which enables students to argue timely questions of international law in regional and final competitions against teams from 150 law schools in 20 different countries. Students receive two units for participating in the competition.

Law of the Sea (2)
This seminar covers legal problems encountered in government and private practice regarding the rights of coastal states over territorial waters and strategic straits; establishment of exclusive national economic zones and fisheries; activities on the high seas; efforts to control marine pollution; and exploitation of the mineral resources of the international seabed. Particular attention is given to United Nations efforts toward a comprehensive treaty for international regulation of oceans use. Prior or concurrent class in International Law is recommended.

Requirements for the M.A. Degree in International Affairs

The International Affairs curriculum provides opportunity for in-depth study of U.S. relations with selected countries and geographic areas of major significance in contemporary world economics and politics.

The M.A. degree in International Affairs requires successful completion of 12 graduate seminars (36 units) and consists of two parts: a five-seminar core curriculum (15 units) and 21 units of electives to be chosen from a list of courses.

In addition to the courses listed below, students admitted to this program are expected to possess a level of mathematical skill at least equivalent to Intermediate Algebra (Math 20). Students may meet this requirement by satisfying one of the five screening criteria listed under the heading “Mathematics Proficiency” in the section on “Admission to Master’s Degree Programs.” Prior to registering for their ninth seminar in the program (i.e., after completing eight seminars), students also must demonstrate written and spoken knowledge of at least one language other than English. Students unable to demonstrate an acceptable level of proficiency in written and spoken English are required to take appropriate English language courses.

III. Institute of International Studies:

*All inclusive, encompasses all of the above and several more. (directory insert)

IV. International dimensions on degree programs:

*The BA in business administration is less focused than graduate instruction. Its true distinctiveness resides in the integration of a well rounded liberal arts education with a professional concentration in bss admin.

*The Haas School co-sponsors three concurrent-degree programs:
--JD/MBA
--MBA/MPH
--MBA/MA in Asian Studies

V. Languages:

*Chinese
*Japanese
*Spanish
*French
*Russian
*Italian
*Portuguese
*Dutch
*Korean
*Tibetan
VI. Language requirements:

* Depending on the scope and breadth of language study, they all have a minor certificate. The romance languages all have BA / PhD degrees.

* Language requirements for graduation: For admission into the university, two years of a foreign language required in HS with a grade of C or better, which would also meet the graduation guidelines. Depending on the track of study an additional year may be required.

VII. Study Abroad Programs:

* University has programs in Africa, Asia, Australia and New Zealand, Central America, Europe, Middle East, North and South America.

VIII. Intercultural / Communication studies:

* Sponsored by all the area studies program.

IX. Career placement services:

* Career planning and placement center conducts workshops, counseling and teaches job search techniques, career library provides information on directories of employers, past and present job listings. Comprehensive and all inclusive.

X. International non credit programs:

* Funded by and conducted by the area centers (inserts)
Stanford University

I. International Relations Program:

"Has both an undergraduate and graduate program designed to enable students to study int'l relations in a variety of dimensions and from a variety of disciplinary perspectives. The program aims to educate broad-ranged citizens who will be sensitive to the complexities of relations among different cultures, sophisticated in their ability to think about world affairs, and capable of doing creative work the int'l arena.

BA in IR---Required 50 units in the major including both political science, international politics, and one course in American foreign policy, as well as two courses from the Department of Economics. Each student is required to demonstrate proficiency in a language other than English, equivalent to at least two years of university-level instruction. All IR majors are expected to have an overseas study experience (Stanford Overseas Study Program) or its equivalent.

MA in IR---39 units can work simultaneously for a coterminous masters degree in related fields. Most common is Intl Policy Studies.

Student can choose any one of three clusters of emphasis:

*Cluster A: Political-Historical Emphasis. [Latin America, Europe, Africa, Asia].

*Cluster B: Humanities Emphasis. [Ethnic problems, ethics, literature and thought].

*Cluster C: Political-Economic Issues and Policy Analysis. [Latin America, Europe, Africa, Asia].

II. Area Studies and/or Centers (Inserts):

1. Center for African Studies
2. Asia/Pacific Research Center
3. Center for East Asian Studies (CEAS)
4. Center for European Studies
5. Center for International Security and Arms Control
6. Center for Latin American Studies (CLAS)
7. Center for Russian and East European Studies (CREES)
8. German Studies
9. Morrison Institute for Population and Resource Studies (non degree)
10. International Policy Studies (IPS)
11. The Americas Program

III. International Study Center

*Stanford has four interdisciplinary language and area programs: African Studies, East Asian Studies, Latin American Studies, and Russian and East European Studies. These are separately organized as centers responsible for coordinating the University's resources in all schools and departments for teaching and research relating to each of these areas. The area studies programs do not offer the PhD, but qualified doctoral candidates may develop an area specialization within their discipline.

IV. International dimensions of major degree programs: (insert)

*The two-year MBA degree is designed for the student who seeks preparation for a professional career in management. No specific undergraduate major or courses are required for admission although perspective applicants are encouraged to have two or more years managerial experience and to include some mathematics and economics in their undergraduate programs. Possible options within the MBA program include a specialty in Public Management and a program leading to the joint JD/MBA degree.

*Although no specific int'l business courses are offered leading to a major or minor, a concentration can be had within the MBA program. As an example, the elective course Money and Capital Markets devotes more than half of its material to international financial markets, and the two-course elective Taxes and Business Strategy includes tax-related problems dealing with multinational transactions. Faculty members regularly teach and travel abroad, bringing their insights to the classroom. In recent years, 20 percent or more of the student body has been international. MBA students use some of their elective credits to take foreign language classes either to maintain or learn a new language.

*A limited number of MBA students have the opportunity to spend one quarter taking classes at Stanford's campus in Kyoto, Japan. The program involves academic coursework in language, culture, and economic and political systems. The academic experience is followed by a summer internship in a Japanese firm. Students must have Japanese language skills before enrolling.

V. Languages:

*Foreign languages taught are nine, all of them have MA and PhD programs. Korean is offered only up to the third year.

*Spanish, Italian, French, Chinese (Mandarin), German, Japanese, Russian, and Portuguese.

*The Special Languages Program offers a number of foreign languages not otherwise taught at Stanford. Based on current funding and requests for beginning or intermediate levels; the courses are planned accordingly. Six African languages, Arabic, Yiddish, Hebrew, Dutch, Tagalog, Vietnamese, Hindi, Indonesian, Modern Greek, Thai, and Sign (ASL).

VI. Language Requirements for BA, MA, PhD:

*Undergraduate Programs: In addition to the first three years of language study, all language majors must complete 60 units of additional coursework, distributed in accordance with the specialization they have selected, i.e., linguistics, semiotics, culture.

*Undergraduates who entered Stanford in September 1982 or thereafter must complete at least one year of college-level study in a single language.

*Graduate Programs: The AM provides a combination of language, literature, cultural history, and methodology courses. Candidates must complete a minimum of 36-50 units of graduate work depending on the language selected and pass a final examination. To fulfill the requirements in one year, they enroll for an average of 12-20 units per quarter.

Doctor of Philosophy: In accordance with the University's regulations, candidates for the PhD must complete nine quarters (three full years) of full time work, or the equivalent, in graduate study beyond the bachelor's degree. Of the nine quarters, a minimum of three must be taken consecutively at Stanford. On the average per language, a maximum of 72-90 units of graduate work, in addition to the doctoral dissertation, are required of every student in the specific language selected.

VII. Study Abroad Programs
*Overseas studies program (insert): Stanford Center for Technology and Innovation-Kyoto; Stanford program in Berlin; Stanford program in Florence; Stanford program in Krakow; Stanford program in Oxford; Stanford program in Paris; Stanford program in Salamanca.

*Inter-University Program for Chinese Language Studies in Taipei: Established in 1963. Sponsored by 10 American universities with Stanford as the administrative agency. Provides intermediate to advanced language training to a carefully selected group of students. (insert)

*Inter-University Center for Japanese Language Studies in Yokohama: Cooperative enterprise of 15 major academic universities in the US and Canada, with Stanford as the the administrative agency. (insert)

VIII. Intercultural / communication studies:

*Program in Cultures, Ideas, and Values (CIV), entering students must complete a three-quarter sequence, or track, expressly designed to introduce them to major works and historical movements in human heritage. The sequences have different formats, but in addition to the common readings they share another important feature. Each sequence provides at least two hours per week of small group instruction with an experienced teacher. Tracks are in: Europe and The Americas: literature, history, and anthropology. Philosophy and Human Experience, Technology and Culture: science and technology interacting with philosophy, literature, politics and art. Literature and the History of Ideas, Europe: From Antiquity to the Present, Literature and the Arts.

IX. Career placement services:

*Each school of thought has career centers relevant to the study area. They range from paid and non-paid internships to co-op programs to on campus recruiting and special services for individual companies seeking the qualified pool of applicants from the major disciplines of Stanford.

X. International non-credit programs:

*The closest to perhaps non-credit oriented programs are two undergraduate research opportunity centers. Giving fellowships and grants for individual study projects. With the existence of eleven major area studies and centers, it is very easy to track and develop an area of interest. The opportunity to meet and network with each of them is unsurpassable.
Monterey Institute of International Studies

I. International Relations Program:

• The primary emphasis in the international relations program (BA) is to give a student a solid foundation in political science, economics, language and area studies. This degree is designed to prepare students for the Institute's master's programs in International Policy Studies (MA), in International Public Administration (MPA) and in International Management (MBA) which can be combined an awarded jointly with the any of the aforementioned.

• International Policy Studies is perhaps the closest to its counterpart IR, which is offered both as an undergraduate honors program and as perhaps the most inclusive international master’s program in the west. The 64 unit BA in International Studies requires 16 units of language study at the third-year university level or above. The majority of Institute undergraduates continue for graduate work at the Institute. Students subsequently admitted to the international MBA or MPA, or the master’s program in International Policy Studies can complete both degrees in a total of three years. The IPS MA requires a minimum of core course requirements provides flexibility for students to pursue in-depth policy specializations. Students choose from a range of intermediate and advanced economics courses. The 60-unit program requires 12 units of language study at the third-year university level or above.

II. Centers or Area Studies:

• Listed under academic resources:

1. Language Technology Center, interactive laser videodisc equipment, recorders, VCR’s, satellite dish brings in 12 hours of daily foreign language news broadcasts from around the world.

2. Business and Economic Development Center, provides link between the local and regional business communitites and governments which are seeking to improve their international business opportunities. Ongoing symposia brings speakers from Pacific Rim and Europe, from government to education.

3. Center for Contemporary Russian Studies (CCRS), teaching and research center focuses on the changes in the Soviet Union. Coordinates Russian Studies curriculum at the Institute. (insert)

Area Studies: (insert)

1. Chinese Studies
2. English Studies
3. French Studies
4. German Studies
5. Hispanic Studies
6. Japanese Studies
7. Russian Studies

III. Institutes of International Policy Studies: the campus itself, but the MA in international policy studies coordinates the curriculum with its specializations in translation, and language studies. (insert)

IV. International dimensions of major degree programs:

The MIIS is designed for the international environment. The MBA program at the MIIS has been designed for the last ten years to offer the necessary skills to work in an international business setting.

1. International Management: develops bilingual, bicultural global managers with strong functional business skills. The core curriculum focuses on international business and is supplemented by regional courses that complement students' second languages. The 64-unit program requires 12 units of language study at the third-year university level or above. Interesting to note, that there are a few business courses that are offered in Spanish (financial acct), German (international mktg), Mandarin (mgmt). (insert)

2. International Public Administration: Most courses focus on international and crosscultural applications of skills required in research methods, public budgeting, organization management, economics, accounting, quantitative analysis. 63-unit program requires 12 units of language study.

3. Language Teaching: The MA in Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) and the MA in Teaching Foreign Language (TFL) have common research design, linguistics, pedagogical theory and practice. 32-unit MA programs, a 17-unit certificate program is available during the academic year or over two summers. (insert)

4. Translation and Interpretation: MIIS offers the only graduate degrees in the western hemisphere in Conference Interpretation, and in Translation and Interpretation between English-Chinese and English-Japanese. The curriculum focuses on the transfer of meaning from one language to another, not on language learning as such. Course work requires two years of study at the Institute. (insert)

V. Languages:
Ten languages at the elementary and intermediate levels are offered in small intensive classes during eight-week and nine-week summer programs. These languages are also offered throughout the normal year. Arabic, Chinese, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese, Russian, and Spanish.

VI. Language requirements:

*BA requirements for all language study programs is 64 units. Before undertaking upper division work, students are required to complete the equivalent of two years of study and pass a third year entrance exam into any of the seven language study programs.

*Undergraduate programs at the Institute concentrate on the acquisition of fluency in a second language. Two years are a requirement.

VII. Study Abroad Programs:

*The typical period for study abroad as part of an Institute program is one semester. Written approval must be obtained in advance from the relevantdivision dean and the Academic Dean. The Career Development Office provides information regarding available accredited schools and programs for study abroad.

VIII. Intercultural / Communication Studies:

*TESOL and TFL MA programs (insert)
*Translation and Interpretation (T&I) (insert)

IX. Career Placement Services:

*The Career Development / Alumni Office (CDO) at the Institute operates in partnership with students, alumni, faculty, staff and employers. Twenty clipboards contain the latest information on jobs in different sectors: private, public, non profit and education. CDO maintains a comprehensive library on international internships and careers. CDO conducts self-assessment workshops to gain clearer picture of career choices. Jeff Wood-Director of Career Development.

X. Non credit international programs:

*Comparative Cultures, examine outlooks on different cultures, political, social, literary.

*Intensive Summer Language Programs: proceeding
*Summer Study in Spain
Study / Internship in France: cooperative program between the Institut de Formation a la vente internationale in Rouen, France.

*English as a Second Language

*Training for Services Abroad (TSA), TSA tutorials currently enable executives and representatives of both American and foreign firms, journalists or private citizens to acquire the language proficiency and cross-cultural business skills necessary for internationally oriented operations. Intensive training in any language, cultural traditions, contemporary issues, cross-cultural business and management techniques. 30 hours of instruction per week for six weeks.
San Francisco State University

I. International Relations Program:

*Both Undergraduate (39 units) (Honors Program requires an additional 6 units of instruction) and Graduate (33 units) degrees offered. In order to graduate in the IR Honors Program, a student must demonstrate proficiency in a modern foreign language as evidenced by: two years of college level instruction, or passing of a proficiency examination. (insert)

II. Area Studies or Centers:

*The International Relations Center is a teaching laboratory, a data bank, a clearinghouse, and a forum for the expression of the widest range of ideas about matters of international significance. Center is controlled by the IR faculty.

*No formal area studies but a concentration and emphasis is available depending on the area of interest, ie. Latin America, Middle East, Asia, Africa.

*The Center for World Business: coordination of foreign academic programs, sponsoring seminars, financing special student and staff research.

*US-Canada Business Institute

*US-China Institute

*US-Japan Institute

*US-Korea Business Institute

*US-Soviet Business Institute

*Most all of the above institutes work under the Business Department's auspices, all focusing in bridging the gap between the two nations economic and commercial interests. Excellent resources and up to date data on various aspects of study.

III. Institute of International Studies: None

IV. International dimensions of degree programs:

*International Business: minor, BA, MBA
*Marketing, management and finance, all incorporate aspects of international focus. Courses in international business are incorporated into curriculum. No formal degrees granted such as in IBUS. Concentrations are available though.

V. Languages:

*Chinese
*French
*German
*Italian
*Japanese
*Portuguese
*Russian
*Spanish

*BA's and MA's are granted in all except Portuguese, which is only offered once every other year at a basic and intermediate level; with the budget cuts, it will be offered again in 1994. (inserts)

*Demonstrated foreign language proficiency at a level comparable to an intermediate college level course, with a grade of C- or higher. Fall 1992 catalog an on required to meet this language proficiency.

VII. Study Abroad Programs:

*There is a myriad of study abroad programs some sponsored by the CSU system, others by their individual department. Students are encouraged to make full use of the school's International Program Center. (insert)

VIII. Intercultural / communication studies:

*They exist but as ethnic studies: Asian-American, African-American, Chicano and La Raza studies, Women Studies. Minors and BA's are granted in all.

IX. Career placement services:

*The University maintains a Career Center to assist students and graduates. Services are helpful and inclusive of various online databases. Four major areas of help: Career Planning Career Information Career Experiences Job Assistance

X. International non-credit programs:
"Sponsored by the various institutes mentioned above."
I. International Relations Program:

*Under the Government major there is a concentration in IR. International Studies, only minor offered, to complement BA programs.

*Major is in a modern language with an emphasis on international studies, which includes cultural and political background.

II. Area Studies or Centers:

*Asian Studies
*Latin American Studies

III. Institute of International Studies: None

IV. International dimensions of degree programs:

University of San Francisco

I. International Relations Program: None, except for a 39-unit BA in Government. No emphasis, very basic. (insert)

II. (A) Center for Pacific Rim Studies

* Director of the Program is Barbara Bundy. She was president of Dominican College; founder of Pacific Basin Studies program there. She apparently brought a few of her sponsors and contributors to the Lone Mountain annex, where she has successfully phased into USF an almost parallel study program. Currently, as of November 1992, there exists only an Asian Pacific Studies Certificate Program, but as of August 1993, an M.A. in Asia Pacific Liberal Studies will be offered. The MA will be based on three semester modules, maximum of 25 students enrolled for a full commitment of 23 months. Students cannot drop out of program, if they do, they must reenter the "cohort" the next year. The cohort is instituted and will function as a support network. To quote their literature, "the multidisciplinary emphasis and team approach reflects an emerging new model for professional education."

(B) Special Programs:

* Western European Studies Certificate: 15 unit certificate; focuses mainly on France, Belgium, Luxembourg, and Switzerland. 8 units of French required. Addenda is same as above.

* Asia/Pacific Studies Certificate: 19 units of core courses, history, language, mainly Japanese, economics, religion. Smaller offshoot of the MA program outlined above.

Heading of Study is under Enrichment Programs in catalog. pp. 178,179,184,190.

III. International Studies Center: none. Everything is based within the University Center Bldg as far as languages and special programs, different floors no central info desk.

IV. (A) International Business [inserts yellow, green, white]

Emphases: Finance, Management, Marketing

* International Executive Education Programs offered by the McLaren Graduate School of Management provides personalized education and training programs related to the Pacific Rim for domestic and international businesses. A new executive MBA is also offered for experienced American and international executives.

(B) Education: Adult Learners International (ALI), a program of Organization and Leadership in the School of Education offering a Certificate, MA and EdD, focused on international communication, cultural studies, organizational leadership and change. Research and internships abroad related to Pacific Rim.

(C) Law: One of just a handful of study certificates available in the nation with an Asian Pacific focus. A three year concentration within the JD degree program offered by the School of Law, included graduate courses in comparative and international law. (Insert)

(D) Hospitality Management; no real "international" focus although there are internships available with national and foreign hotels that give the opportunity to travel and learn from respective country placements. (Insert)

V. Languages

*The Foreign Languages Dept offers majors in French and Spanish. Language study in German, Greek, Hebrew, Italian, Japanese, Latin, and Mandarin. All of the language studies have a three incremental semester caps.

VI. Language requirements of BA in Spanish and French are similar (38 units each), except that French has a two course requirement in Bss Adm, Comm Theory, Government History, Phil., Psy. or Sociology.

*Two years of a foreign language required in the Arts, Sciences and Hospitality baccalaureate degrees. Business programs are in the process of requiring similar curriculum.

VII. Study Abroad Programs:

*USF is affiliated with 16 study abroad centers in Austria, England, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Singapore and Spain. Interested junior students are encouraged to attend one of these schools for a semester or year. The Jesuit Exchange Program allows student to spend a semester at Boston College or Fordham University in NYC.

*The Pacific Rim Center offers a variety of faculty and student exchange and study abroad programs---with the Shanghai Institute of Foreign Trade; the East China Institute of Politics and Law in Shanghai; East China Normal University in Shanghai; Sophia University in Tokyo; and Sogang University in Seoul.
VIII. Inter-cultural / communication studies:

*ALI program

IX. Career placement services:

*McLaren School has a very helpful and informative placement center. Depending on what discipline student wishes to specialize in, there are opportunities throughout each individual field.

*Pacific Rim Center has tremendous literature available. Database linked.

X. Non-credit international oriented programs

*Again, doing bss in the Pacific Rim stands out. Seminars and trade shows are conducted through the center.
John F Kennedy University

I. International Relations Program: None

II. Area Studies or Centers:

*The Asian-Pacific Institute closed as of last year, no funding.

III. Institute of International Studies: None

IV. International dimensions of degree programs:

*MBA program has a specialization in International business 18 units. Interesting course in International Trade in the Pacific Basin.

*Humanities cluster has students choose from 12 units in either art, drama, foreign languages, history, literature, music, philosophy, religion, speech.

VII. Study Abroad Programs: None

VIII. Intercultural / communication studies: None

IX. Career placement Services:

*The center maintains a resource library of information on careers, labor market trends, potential employees, and strategies to assist clients in locating employment. Job listings are received daily from major Bay Area employers.

X. International non-credit programs: None.
Saint Mary's College

I. International Relations Program: None

*Government major is available and it is not designed as a vocational major. (insert)

II. Area Studies or Centers: None

III. Institute of International Studies: None

IV. International dimensions of degree programs:

*BA in Business Administration has standard courses: no concentrations; major designed to educate broadly in the business sciences.

*MBA in International Business Program exists, offered as a part and full time format. Established in 1990. (insert)

V. Languages:

*French
*German
*Italian
*Spanish

VI. Language Requirements:

*Majors are offered in French and Spanish; both have been accepted with certain modifications, as meeting the academic requirements of the State of California for a teaching credential. German and Italian are offered as only lower division courses not even leading to a minor. Very basic structure. Elementary and intermediate.

*Six courses in the Humanities Cluster for General Education and Graduation Requirements. Languages is one of eight disciplines students can chose from and take classes.

*Language requirements for graduation: none, unless student is a communications major, in which case one year of a foreign language is required.

VII. Study Abroad Programs:

*January term travel classes are open to all students and allow for one month of guided travel and study abroad. Summer study or travel abroad requires no preparation and can be accepted for a limited college course credit. Saint Mary's maintains affiliations with numerous foreign universities with programs in Europe, Africa, South America and Asia.

VIII. Intercultural / communication studies:

*Students who intend to pursue career of graduate work in areas as bilingual education, IR, or wish to broaden program of studies, can petition to establish an interdisciplinary major in Cross-Cultural Studies. For composition of such, need to contact chairperson of the appropriate department.

IX. Career placement services:

*The Career Development Center offers counseling, internships, and job strategy workshops. Job recruitment interviews are available through the Alumni Office and the Career Fair in the fall and spring.

X. International non-credit programs: None
Mills College

I. International Relations Program:

*BA includes a 13 semester course credit program, emphasis can be placed on Asian, Hispanic, French and German Studies. Completing the equivalent of four semesters of a foreign language may be substituted for one course in history and one course in anthropology, psychology or sociology. (insert)

*There exists also a Political, Legal, and Economic Analysis interdisciplinary major in which students can specialize in International Analysis, which requires competence at the second-year level of a foreign language. Any difference with an emphasis in the other two fields is only the study and competence in a language. (insert)

II. Area Studies or Centers: (insert)

*Hispanic Studies (BA/minor)
*French Studies (BA/minor)
*German Studies (BA/minor)
*Asian Studies (minor)

III. Institute of International Studies: None

IV. International dimensions of major degree programs:

*There is no Business Dept., therefore no IBUS, International mktg, International finance, International mgmt, majors offered and or concentrations. The Business Economics major is the closest to an overall business degree, as it has classes in intl trade, finance, but as necessary components of the whole and not as an emphasis. (insert)

V. Languages:

*French
*German
*Spanish

*Mills students have the opportunity to study foreign languages other than the three offered on campus-including Chinese, Italian, Japanese and Russian-through cross-registration at Berkeley.

VI. Language Requirements:

*All three programs aimed at developing proficiency both written and spoken and provide understanding of the cultures. All three languages offer a BA degree. (insert)
*Each student is required to earn 2 semester course credits in each of four curricular areas. In the Humanities cluster along with History, Letters, Philosophy, and English, Foreign languages are a choice, not a requirement.

*Language requirements for graduation: None.

VII. Study Abroad Programs:

*All foreign language students are encouraged to spend one semester or year in a foreign country. Study abroad programs are available in Austria, France, Germany, Great Britain, Israel, Italy, Japan, and Spain. Mills has exchange arrangements with Agnes Scott, Barnhard, Hollins, Manhattanville, Mount Holyoke, Russell Sage, Simmons, Spelman, Swarthmore, Wellesley, and Wheaton colleges and at Howard and Fisk universities. American University's Washington Semester program is available for qualified students.

VIII. Intercultural / communication studies:

*Standard communication studies major exists. No international focus.

IX. Career placement services:

*The Center for Career Planning provides counseling. Successful alumnae speak on a regular basis. The Center offers opportunities for liberal arts students. The Management Development Program allows a select group of qualified students to visit local corporations and meet with managers in many kinds of businesses during a special one week seminar each January. Internships are strongly encouraged.

X. International non-credit programs: None.
Dominican College

I. International Relations Program:

Program is in International Studies. Majors choose between two career tracks: IBUS or IR. Students are offered four options for their geographical focus: American Studies, European Studies, Latin American Studies or Pacific Basin Studies. Interdisciplinary in its approach, the program allows students to select courses from art history, business, comparative literature, foreign languages, history, literature, poly sci, and religion. The ability to communicate in a second language and cross cultural communication skills are also stressed.

Language Requirements: 15-16 units in a selected second language and/or passing a proficiency exam.

Career Track Requirements: Int'l Relations majors must take 15 upper division units in Poly Sci. IBUS must take 15 upper division units as well.

II. Area Studies or Centers:

Institute for Pacific Basin Affairs, the PBS Graduate Program focuses on three main areas: research and publication; seminars and symposia; and executive management training programs. The Institute also manages the Visiting Scholar Program and the Research Fellow Program. The only center of area studies department, although Intl Studies is under the heading of international programs headed by LePage; looking at the catalog, it doesn't give you a sense of what classes are available when focus is not the Pacific Basin, ie, the above geographical area studies.

III. Institute of International Studies:

Again, only the Intl Studies major, no clearing house of policy or research other than the PBS department.

IV. International dimensions of major degree programs:

The Department of Business offers three tracks of particular interest to students: Management and Marketing, International Business, Accounting and Finance. Except for the obvious IBUS, the rest have a decidedly domestic track, although in mgmt, there is a couple of intl marketing classes and in finance the same is true. The MBA track in IBUS is decidedly towards the Pacific Basin.
V. Languages:

*Chinese, French, Japanese, Spanish
*Additional Modern Foreign Language Offerings: in addition to those listed above, Italian, Portuguese, German, Russian and/or other MFL are given depending on student interests and needs.

VI. Language Requirements for Degree:

*Dominican has a two year, 16 unit lower division sequence in the four languages mentioned above; as well as, intensive one semester, 11-unit workshops to promote the rapid acquisition of the languages picked. No BA apparent, highest level of instruction seems to be very intermediate. There is however, a minor in Foreign Language and Area Studies. 6 upper division units required.

*Out of the nine general thematic areas of General Education requirements for graduation, none stresses the study of a foreign language. One of the thematic clusters focuses on Cultural Heritage, but no focus is needed.

*Foreign Language requirements for graduation: 2 semesters of foreign language.

VII. Study Abroad Programs:

*Programs for study in other countries may be planned in consultation with faculty in the appropriate departments. Dominican College will grant units for foreign study only after a student has returned to the College campus and enrolled for the following year.

*In the summer, Dominican offers at Oxford, England, a 6-week program in which students take courses in British econ, politics, intl bus or independent study.

*Dominican has an exchange program with: Aquinas College, Grand Rapids, Michigan; Barry University, Miami; and St. Thomas Aquinas College, Sparkill, New York.

VIII. Intercultural / communication studies:

*Structured program does not exist, perhaps the closest would be those courses associated with the PBS program of study as well as the Intl Studies BA in which students take cross-cultural, language and business courses, respective of their major.
IX. Career placement services:

- Dominican offers job fairs and job placement services. Seniors, graduate students, and students earning a teaching credential, can use Dominican's job placement office as a central location for housing their resume and job search files.

- Internship Programs and counseling appointments are available. The Career Resource Library provides info on career exploration and developing job search skills. EUREKA guidance is available, printed and av materials.

X. International non credit programs:

- PBS center comes to attention as language and workshops of how to do bse in this region may be offered depending on need and interest.

PARTICIPATION IN TASK FORCE
APPENDIX F

PARTICIPATION IN TASK FORCE

This task force, concerned with curriculum, was made up primarily of faculty involved in international studies and/or globalization of the curriculum and/or with particular area expertise. A steering committee met once to give general direction to a smaller working group; several other faculty members were consulted independently. A number of other people were invited to participate but could not because of time pressures. A graduate student assistant helped with the research on programs at other institutions. Reference librarian Joshua Adarkwa provided bibliographic references for further study.

Working group:

Laina Farhat (Humanities / UNA-SF / Middle East)
Richard Harris (Public Administration / Management / Latin America)
Karine Schomer, Chair (Dean of Arts and Sciences / India / South & Southeast Asia)
Walt Stevenson (Management / Cultural Diversity / Globalization)

Steering committee:

Joshua Adarkwa (Reference Librarian / Africa)
Marcelo Ramos (Political Science Chair / Philippines)
Hal Sarf (Political Science Adjunct / US Foreign Policy)
John Sloane (International Affairs Adjunct / former Chair of International Relations at SF State / Europe)
Nathan Strong (Anthropology / Japan / East Asia)
Sompong Sucharitkul (Head of GGU International Law Program / Thailand / Pacific Rim / Europe)

Others consulted:

Admassu Bezabeh (Chair of International Management & International Affairs Program / Africa / Middle East
Tony Branch (Academic Vice President)
Joanne Wegsten (Chair of General Management)
Jay Ward (Asst. Dean, International Student Program)

Graduate student assistant

Manual Santamaria (Public Administration / Latin America)
